FAQ'S

Will ClearShield damage latex gloves if I use it at the same time I am wearing them?

When applied as directed, ClearShield will not harm or reduce the effectiveness of latex gloves.

Will ClearShield protect against latex and plastic allergies?

No. ClearShield is not intended to protect against allergic reaction to latex proteins or other reactive chemicals that can be found in some latex and plastic products.

Will ClearShield transfer from the hands to food or other items that I touch?

If applied as recommended, ClearShield coats the upper layer of the skin and bonds with the cells to form a solid molecular barrier that should not transfer to anything you touch.

Does ClearShield protect against HIV or other microbes?

No. ClearShield is not germicidal or virucidal, and it cannot protect you against HIV, STDs or other germs and/or viruses.

Can ClearShield be used on open wounds?

No. ClearShield is intended for application only to intact skin and is not designed to provide protection to cuts or abrasions.
